Investigation Continues

Skeletal Remains Still Unidentified

by DEBBIE POWELL
ESTILL COUNTY TRIBUNE

The skeletal remains of a young, white female found about one half mile off Broadway are still unidentified, according to Estill County Sheriff Montie Parks.

At 9:12 a.m., Friday night the Irvine Police Department reported the discovery of skeletal remains to our office, said a Kentucky State Police spokesman.

Bob Walker, Estill County deputy sheriff, said an unnamed subject was walking through the woods behind Winn's garage on Broadway when he found a pair of shoes, without laces and sitting side-by-side by a tree. The subject then noticed a peculiar odor and reportedly saw another article of clothing laying in a drain.

The subject left the scene and returned with three other men who found the piece of clothing to be a pair of jeans which encased the pelvic bone of a female. Jaw bones and a white jacket were found near the jeans. The shoe laces were also found here.

Returning to the Irvine Police Department, the group alerted the sheriff's department and the Kentucky State Police.

Several rescue squad members, police officers, member of the sheriff's department and volunteers returned to the densely wooded rarely travelled area.

Up to the right of where the jeans were found, a torso was discovered. About 100 yards down the drain an arm and the remainder of the skull was found.

Although several other bones were found in the area, some bones were not found.

A forensic pathologist from Lexington took the bones and will make a model of what the female would have looked like according to the structure of the bones.

Walker said the model may be complete in two or three days or two or three weeks, according to the work the state pathologist has.

He said the many fox, dog and other animal tracks lead the investigators to believe that the body was torn apart and cleaned by the animals.

Sheriff Montie Parks said that although no identification could be made until the model is ready, the clothing remains on the body indicate the skeleton may be that of a local teenager who has been missing for about three months.

Walker said if the body is that of the missing female the body could have been frozen and preserved during the winter storms.

Much information is being withheld pending completion of the model and the investigation.

"Nobody knows" where the city boundaries are, said Councilman until after a lengthy investigation by the council as to where the boundaries are.

Davis said he did not feel that any action should be taken before the May 22 meeting.
